REFLECTIONS

(Editor's note: The following poem was written by Jane Durham, 15, of Richmond, Va., daughter of Mrs. Walter Durham and the late Mr. Durham, and niece of Mrs. Alpha Higginbotham, of Appomattox. It was published in the April issue of Garden Gossip, a magazine published in Richmond.)

In the beginning there was naught
but void,
And darkness covered everything that was.
There was no earth, no firmament,
no sun,
And over all there ruled a mighty
God.
This God spoke up, and there was sudden light.
He spoke again, the waters fell
aside,
And there was land between.
The grass grew green; majestic
trees rose up,
And God made living things upon the earth.
Then made He man, and said that he would have
Dominion over all that was thereon.
And so it was. And all things multiplied,
'Til nations rose, and man was powerful.
Then God saw evil here.
He sent His only son to tell the world
The wonders and the majesty and awe
That can be known by deep humility.
The word was spread and felt by many hearts,
And many died for what they did believe.
And Christianity was here on earth
For all who worshipped God.
But faith was not enough for this mankind.
He wanted power superseding God's.
He wanted to rule all the earth and sky;
To have his fellow-man bow down
to him.
And so came all the horrors of a war
Of persecution, and of evil deeds.
So we began to fall.
And man did wrack the brains God
gave to him,
Inventing implements of true destruction.
He broke the laws that God did give to him,
And said that they were for some other man.
He felt he had the power to give life
Or take it, as the whim did turn
his mind,
And there was war.
God saw it all, and at each foolish
act,
He felt a knife turn sharply in His heart.
But man was too preoccupied with self
To think about the pain he was inflicting.
And so the world was blackened
with the sin,
The hate, and with the deadly mass
of greed
That turns us into beasts.
It seems that through the countless space of time,
In which mankind has learned so
many things,
Quite strange the one thing that he cannot learn
Is how to live with others of his kind.
But God sees all, and if we do not stop;
Reflect upon the things that are
occurring,
We soon will find that God will take a stand.
And though we know not what He will decide,
He may see fit to end this evil
wreck—
Will there be void again?

HYBRIDS RESIST CORN SMUT BEST

No hybrid is completely immune to smut, but most of the recommended hybrids are reasonably resistant, says Jim Smith, County Agent. Plant breeders are making rapid progress in developing new hybrids highly resistant to smut.

Corn smut is not a seed-borne disease; therefore, seed disinfectant does not help. Collecting and destroying galls will help some, but this is practical only in small plantings. Crop rotation in which corn is not grown more often than one year in three will help reduce the concentration of the fungus in the soil. The smut fungus lives over from year to year in old smutty corn stalks. The smut spores may be blown by the wind for considerable distances. Therefore, locate the new field as far as practical from the last year's smutty corn field.

The factors which determine the amount of common smut are not fully understood. Dry weather in late spring and early summer seems to favor its spread and development. Corn gorwn on heavily manured soils often shows a lot of smut. Plants on such soil make a succulent growth, which probably makes it easy for the fungus to penrtate. Such soils also may provide a good medium for overwintering and germination of the smut spores. Hail damage, injuries from cultivating equipment, or destasseling, may provide exposed tissues which will favor the start of smut infection.

AHS Newscast

By Jane Holt

Appomattox, Virginia
May 17, 1955

Dear June,

The Seniors of A. H. S. have returned to school after a most exciting tour of our nation's capitol. We saw so many points of interest. After enjoying a delicious luncheon with Congressman W. M. Abbitt, we took a complete tour of our capitol: Supreme Court Building, Library of Congress and the F. B. I. Building. To many of us the F. B. I. Building was most interesting. Along with these, we toured the Jefferson Memorial, Lincoln Memorial, and Washington Monument. Probably our most inspiring visit was to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery. We came home feeling as though we were much better educated after seeing these places I have enumerated with other points of interest.

Tuesday night our baseball team chalked up a 6 to 5 victory over Halifax High School. Our team did a good job of playing. During the game, Pete Baber was hit by a baseball, which gave us all a scare. However, it wasn't enough to put Pete out of the game, and he did an excellent job of playing.

Thursday the Junior Play was presented. They gave three fine performances, which we all enjoyed thoroughly.

Friday, May 20th, the S. C. A. is holding its annual election of officers. A great deal of campaigning is being done through the halls of A. H. S. Also, Friday the S. C. A. led by Edna Gregory, is sponsoring a clean-up day, followed by a Sadie Hawkins dance that night.

As we didn't have our regular club schedule this week, news is slow concerning clubs. The students have been planning schedules for next year. It seems mighty odd to us seniors not to be working with schedules.

Our annuals are to arrive soon. We are all excited about seeing our new year book. To the students of A. H. S. I would like to say, please buy your annuals now!

This concludes the local happenings for now around our school. Be looking fo rmore news from me next week, same time. I hope by that time that you will have bought your annual.

'Til then,
Jane.
